A. Introduction

In communication, people interact one with the others for the sake of understanding the message or ideas presented using language. Kreidler (1998:19) stated that "language is a system of symbols through which people communicate. There are main parts of linguistics, they are phonetic and phonology, morphology, syntax, pragmatics and semantics. In this case, the researcher focussed on meaning of words and sentences. However, semantic is also dealing with relation human words and word.

Furthermore, in linguistics, semantics is the study of the relationship between words and how the process of drawing meaning from text. Yule (1985:320) stated that "semantic is the study of meaning in words, phrase and sentences". In semantics, meaning is divided into two parts, literal meaning and non-literal meaning. Literal meaning as a denotative meaning based on actual words or the real meanings and non-literal meaning is the other way around its occurs when the speaker's meaning different from what the real meaning, we can say that as connotative meaning. The listener may find it difficult to understand what the speaker wants to convey if the speaker speaks non literally. To expressing that ideas from semantics are used some way through denotative and connotative meaning. while, meaning includes both denotation and connotation. Denotative meaning is what the dictionary attempts to provide. It means that denotative meaning is the objective (dictionary) relationship between a word and the reality to which it refers. While connotative meaning is the communicative power of a word by virtue what it refers to (Leech, 1981:12).

Connotative meaning is difficult to interpret for general listener. Based on data that researcher collected that some people did not understand about connotative meaning that provides when listened. Some people does not get the point and the meaning what the speaker say, the listener just enjoy to hearing the lyric songs without understanding and knowing the connotative meaning that consist on it. Related to the statement and explanations above, learning about connotative meaning is very important. While, it can help make it easier to find and understand about what is being conveyed or being told. One of example to find the connotative meaning used in a lyrics song.

Every song has many messages and need to analyze the meaning of the song to understand the song. In daily life, many people listen a lot of song. Song lyric is one of literary works and it is has meaning. Every song contains lyric which has certain connotative meaning to be heard. Song lyrics are often used by the creator as an intermediary to convey and to expressing feeling that expose the author's thoughts are made with various types of language style. The one of it Linkin Park.

Furthermore, in linkin park a thousand suns album the researcher found some connotative meaning, the connotative meaning that found is negative emotion such as angry, disappointment, selfish creature, and arrogant. Connotative that found produce as follow: (1) Blood in your eyes. The lyrics was taken from the song "Blackout", this lyric used the types of 'Associative meaning' because associative meaning has relationship and connects it with references to stereotype. "blood in your eyes" that is not the real meaning. While, the word 'blood' is expression of someone who is angry, disappointed and emotion that looked from the eyes. So, the word blood is associated with an expression angry, disappointed and emotion. .
